West Sacramento

- The Washington Firehouse, constructed in 1939 as a Works Progress Administration project, was designed by George Sellon, the first California State Architect and designer of San Quentin Prison.
- Architectural features of the Art Deco/Streamline Moderne building include a round port hole in a wing wall, semi-circular corners, and three horizontal fins on the tower element.
- The Washington Firehouse has housed both the City of West Sacramento fire and police departments and a Yolo County Sheriff's substation. It has also been a community center hosting meetings, celebrations and weddings.
- The proposed adaptive reuse project will provide for an art center and history museum for the City of West Sacramento.
